Excerpt from Notes on Mexico, Made in the Autumn of 1822: Accompanied by an Historical Sketch of the Revolution, and Translations of Official Reports on the Present State of That Country

The Notes, which form the subject of these pages, were written during the Author's rapid journey through Mexico, in the autumn of 1822, and were addressed in letters to a friend, without any intention of their ever being made public. But the deep and peculiar interest felt by the people of the United States, in every thing relating to that country, and the imperfect accounts that exist of the causes and character of the revolution which it has lately undergone, have induced him to consent to their publication.

A Diary is not perhaps the best form for a work of this description; nor is it that which the Author himself would have preferred; but to have altered the letters, so as to present a more connected narrative, would have required more time than he could spare from other avocations; and to have delayed their publication much longer would have deprived them of their chief interest.
