Gambling Tips - How To Gamble:

Example from the book:

Playing poker online is fun and I dabble at it as well every once in awhile. However, numerous players seem to feel that playing in a live tournament is really comparable to playing online. Well, it is and it is not. Here are 9 golden tips on how to ease your transition from playing online to playing in a live poker tournament.

1) If you have difficulty facing pressure in daily life, don't think that playing in front of watchful eyes and a roomful of people will have no effect on you. If you are really easily moved and influenced, I suggest you keep your money and forget about playing in a tournament at all and this is relevant even more when talking about a live poker tournament.

2) Wear comfy and not fashionable clothes. This isn't a fashion show: this is poker. Thus, wear those clothes that will help you feel comfy and at ease. I have known a woman who wore tight jeans and then all through the round, she kept fidgeting uncomfortably. Regardless to say, she was the initial one to lose and all because she was dressed uncomfortably.

3) Drink only water and even then only a little so that you won't feel thirsty and also won't get the urge to go to the lavatory. Either of the two feelings are disastrous to a poker player in the midst of a hand.

4) Don't drink alcohol or even sugared soft drinks. Alcohol will cause you to lose your concentration and sweet drinks give a false sense of well-being; both will work towards you when you play in a live game.

5) Don't sit next to the dealer. Most poker tournaments allow you to pick your seat in the earlier rounds. It is greatest to sit opposite the dealer so that you will be able to look at each and every poker player.

6) Try not to change positions whilst playing. If you really start to feel uncomfortable, change your position after a hand ends. In not condition should you move whilst playing.

7) Go to the toilet when the break is announced and don't hang around talking. It is greatest to loosen your gall bladder than exchanging a handful words with other players.

8) Watch how others are doing. Those about to lose will opt to play only when they have strong hands; those with a big stack will be more willing to risk it.

9) Learn the rules and regulations of the particular poker tournament you have entered so as to save unnecessary losses.

Live poker games are towards people and so if you can read people well, you will have an advantage when playing in a tournament. But don't over-estimate your opponents. Many poker pros fall to relatively unknown players since they are over-confident. ...
