Thinking about planning a funeral? Want to save time and money? We all come to a stage in our lives when it's natural to think about what will happen when we are no longer around. We wonder about loved ones and what we would like to leave to them as a parting gift. Well, one of the things we shouldn't leave them is the burden of high funeral costs and the worry of deciding on funeral arrangements.

Fortunately, through proper funeral planning, you can ensure that your loved ones are not confronted with this unnecessary burden at a time which is already very traumatic.

In putting together a funeral plan you will need to consider matters such as:-

- * whether you want to donate your body to science;
- * whether you want to be buried or cremated;
- * where you want your remains buried, scattered or kept;
- * the type of ceremony that you will have and where it will be held;
- * whether you wish to be embalmed;
- * whether there will be a procession to the cemetery;
- * how your family will travel to and from services;
- * the funeral products you wish to buy such as caskets, burial vaults and urns; and
- * lots more.

To help you plan your funeral (or someone else's) Enodare has created a book entitled "Funeral Planning Basics" which will guide you through the entire process of planning a funeral!
